Out of Place

You are on a field trip in Washington D.C. to study the presidential monuments. Seeing the Lincoln Memorial at night is the coolest thing you've seen so far. You and your friend walk up to get a closer look at the statue. You reach out and touch the stone, and suddenly you feel something out of place. A small rectangle, no bigger than a credit card, is etched into a flat section. You push a little harder, and the rectangle clicks inward. That's when you hear the rumble.
